

Thursday 16 April 2009

Lyric Theatre Hammersmith are showing Emily Bronte's Wuthering Heights. This version is based in Rajasthan and not in Yorkshire and has a Bollywood touch with usual Indian songs. The address of Lyric Theatre is Kings Mall, King St, London, W6 0QL. We had purchased 65 tickets for those who gave their names last week. These have all been distributed. [I am pleased to confirm that I have successfully booked further 30 tickets for those who gave me their names/money today. These tickets will be distributed next Thursday.

Something about the show: Tamasha takes this timeless love story of untamed passion and class barriers, from the Yorkshire moors to the scorched desert of Rajasthan, to create a vibrant new musical adaptation of Wuthering Heights. Incorporating all the colour, dance and music of classic Indian cinema this story will captivate theatre goers of all ages.

Wuthering Heights is the latest show from Tamasha — creator of dance spectacular Strictly Dandia, award-winning musical Fourteen Songs, Two Weddings and a Funeral and the groundbreaking East is East